

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Clint Bolick is president and general counsel for the Alliance for School Choice, the nation's foremost organization advocating school choice programs for economically and otherwise disadvantaged schoolchildren.

Bolick cofounded the Institute for Justice, a public-interest law firm based in Washington, DC, that litigates in support of economic liberty, private-property rights, school choice, and freedom of speech. During his nearly 13 years at IJ, Bolick engaged in cutting-edge constitutional litigation in a variety of areas, including the defense of school choice programs nationwide that culminated in 2002 with the landmark U.S. Supreme Court decision in Zelman v. Simmons-Harris. It was also in 2002 that American Lawyer named Bolick one of the nation's three lawyers of the year.

Bolick serves as a research fellow with the Hoover Institution. His most recent previous book is Voucher Wars: Waging the Legal Battle Over School Choice (Cato Institute, 2003). He has been widely published in such media as the Wall Street Journal, the New York Times, and the Washington Post.

Bolick lives in Phoenix, Arizona, with his wife, Shawanna, and son, Ryne.