

EDWARD P. LAZEAR

Morris Arnold Cox
Senior Fellow

Expertise: Labor economics, industrial relations, microeconomics

In addition to his Hoover appointment, Edward Lazear is the Jack Steele Parker Professor of Human Resources, Management and Economics in the Graduate School of Business at Stanford University. He has written extensively on labor markets and personnel issues; education; entrepreneurship; the doctrine of employment at will; government policies on discrimination, affirmative action, and comparable worth; and issues involving worker compensation and effects on productivity. He is the founding editor of the Journal of Labor Economics and has written or edited eight books, including Education in the Twenty-first Century (2002), Personnel Economics (1995), and Economic Transition in Eastern Europe (1995). The holder of a Ph.D. in economics from Harvard University, he is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the Econometric Society. He is also a former president of the Society of Labor Economists and a member of the National Academy of Sciences' Board on Training Assessment, which focuses on general issues related to education and training in the United States.