Sources: Diaries, orders, papers, and notes in the Joseph W. Stilwell Collection, Hoover Institution Archives, Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace, Stanford University, Stanford, California, and personal letters in the possession of John Easterbrook. Compiled by John Easterbrook, April 2002

NOTE: Some time intervals shown between assignments are assumed to be a small number of leave days and/or travel time, and in some cases clearing customs following international travel. Major blocks of leave time are noted. Single day differences were occasionally noted between Stilwell's diaries, summary notes, and orders. In these cases preference was given to daily diary entries when available

JOSEPH W. STILWELL PAPERS

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The papers of Joseph W. Stilwell in the Hoover Institution Archives constitute an extremely valuable resource for scholars and researchers interested in military history in general and in the history of World War II in the China-Burma-India Theater in particular. The historian Barbara W. Tuchman, an authority on the subject of Joseph W. Stilwell's life and career, used these primary source materials extensively for her book, Stilwell and the American Experience in China, 1911-45. These materials contain not only military information, such as plans of troop deployment, determination of war strategy, and handling of supplies, but they also bring to life General Stilwell's personality and character. He was proficient in many languages, traveled widely in connection with his tour of duty, and the papers reflect his interest in and admiration for different cultures.

Handwritten diaries with illustrations constitute the most interesting and significant segment of the collection. Therein Joseph W. Stilwell recorded details of his daily life, his thoughts on various subjects, his trips, his personal life, and important information received from radio messages or via telephone calls. His thoughts, as reflected in these diaries, often developed into plans of military action. General Stilwell never intended that his diaries would be seen by anyone else and he frequently used them to vent the frustrations he faced. The language is often blunt and while they may not reflect his daily behavior, they do provide insights to his character and strengths.

The American Expeditionary Forces, IV Army Corps file contains information relating to the time Joseph W. Stilwell spent at the Army General School in Langres, France, for training, his service with the French army at Verdun, and his work as the Corps' Chief Intelligence Officer. The China-Burma-India Command file provides significant documentation on the situation in the Pacific and in the China-Burma-India sector, his performance as a commander, his grasp of strategic issues, and his persistence in upholding the course of action he believed to be viable. This series also traces the history of his disagreements with Chiang Kai-shek, which led to his recall.

The career file and the personal and family files taken together paint the picture of Joseph W. Stilwell as a man totally dedicated to his family and his country. Various school and family records provide an interesting insight into his family affairs and his performance at school. The literary file reflects his writing skills, as shown by the articles, essays, musical lyrics, poems, and speeches therein.

The memorabilia series, consisting of Joseph W. Stilwell's personal effects, gifts, and souvenirs from the army, provides a rare and interesting opportunity to learn about life in the army with all its paraphernalia. The oversize materials include cartoons, various documents and drafts, maps (including some annotated by Joseph W. Stilwell), and posters, and form an important segment of the collection.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE (Contd.):

The scrapbooks, a collection of clippings, messages, photographs, and souvenirs, contain a wealth of information relating to Joseph W. Stilwell's life. The lantern slides, depicting scenes of life and people in China, are exquisite and unique features of this collection. And among the audio tapes, the recorded messages from Burma and a speech given in San Francisco, California, reveal his skills as a speaker and his sense of humor.

The incremental materials, while complementing the original collection acquired by the Hoover Institution Archives in 1951 from Mrs. Joseph W. Stilwell, bring some new information about Joseph W. Stilwell's personal life and his career in the army. His writings in general, and his letters to his wife in particular, are a significant component of the incremental materials. The issuance of the Stilwell postal stamp, as well as the process leading to this event, represents the nation's tribute to a remarkable man and general.

Finally the photographs, including a number of postcards, depict beautiful scenes and people from China, Japan, the Philippines, and many cities of the United States. They also reveal a very personal side of Joseph W. Stilwell at his residence in Carmel, California, and in his army life as a West Point cadet, as a soldier during his early assignments in Europe, and as a commander of the China-Burma-India sector, in the Philippines, and in the Pacific.

This register is an expanded and more detailed version of an earlier version created after the collection was received. Folder numbers and documents not previously mentioned have been added, but the order of the series has been retained, with one exception - the American Expeditionary Forces series now appears at the beginning. However, new series have been added, the largest one consisting of the incremental material received since the completion of the initial register and listed at the end of the register. Separate series have also been created for the recently created diary transcripts, as well as for the scrapbooks, memorabilia, oversize materials, glass slides, photographs, and phonotape cassettes, which previously were to be found in the miscellany series.
